Under Nola's leadership MISSEY served over 1,000 victims and survivors and trained over 15,000 professionals and community members. Nola transitioned from her role as MISSEY's Executive Director in May of 2014 after seven incredible years of organization growth and impact.

Currently Nola is working as a master-trainer through her new survivor-consultancy company NolaBrantley SPEAKS! where she has already trained 60,000 individuals as well as developed several curriculums. Prior to her directorship at MISSEY from 2001 to 2007 Nola directed the Parenting and Youth Enrichment Department at the Scotland Center where she developed the first case management model for child sex trafficking survivors in Alameda County.
